battalion, under the command of a Commander, whose staff consists of a Licutenant-Commander, navigator, paymaster, surgeon, and assistant surgeon, and eight cnief petty officers, chief gunner's mate, electrician, chief quartermaster, ship's yeoman, pay yeoman, and apothecary. This organization was easily assimilated

"While embarked on this vessel the militia had four days' drill, principally at the great guns boats, and signals. The signal men appear to be quite proficient in the use of the Myers code. The navy general code was used too little to permit any judgment to be passed upon their expertness with it. The men and officers are fairly proficient in the handling of boats under oars and sail. Although the calibres and carriages of this battery were entirely new to all the militiamen, the guns' crew became quite efficient in a very short time, and their drill was good. The gun captains need instruction and experience in pointing quickly and accurately. Good shots were made at the targets with both main and secondary batteries, but, as would naturally be expected, from want of drill and practice the gun captains were slow in getting on the target. The men worked with great spirit and zeal, and care been exercised in selecting the men to fill better results would have been obtained had care been exercised in selecting the men to fill the stations at the guns according to their physical development, giving the heavier men to those stations requiring strength and weight.

"The uniform of both officers and men is practically that of the navy, as far as the working or service dress is concerned. All members have a full dress for social occasions, men and officers being in the same uniform. The uniform is of good quality and design, and seems to give satisfaction.

"Opportunity for the militia to acquire professional knowledge has been very slight. The men are in intelligence and education far above the normal of ships' crews in the navy, and they are zealous, learn very easily, and remember what has been told them. But a fair weather cruise of a few days in a ship fully manned by service men has given no opportunty for an opinion on the extent or value of the professional incovering of the naval willing the professional moved get of the naval willing and the professional moved get of the naval willing and the prof "While embarked on this vessel the militia

"Following closely upon a discussion of the professional knowledge and intimately connected with it, is the question of their efficiency as seamen. Bremen, or ship's artificers. In a fighting machine like the New York the word seamen can be properly used to indicate a grade below that of a petty officer, a man belonging to the deck or combatant force of the ship. Its former meaning cannot be considered in the newer vessels. On this presumption the majority of the militia have proved themselves to be efficient in manning the guns and keeping them in order, and delivering their projectiles with a creditable degree of accuracy. There were no firemen among the militia, but in the Rochester division are two men who would be valuable as water tenders or ollers in the engineer's department. The first hattalion's electrician is capable of taking the entire charge of the electric plant of this vessel, and can supervise the wiring of a mine field. In the Rochester division are two practical electricians who can take charge of a ship's plant, run a dynamo, make any repairs to it, and do all the other work required in the electric system of the ship. This division also includes three skilled machinists, two fairly good machinists, two men capable of firing and running a steam launch, one from worker who would be a good assistant boiler maker, one brass worker and coppersmith. It is understood that men of these professions have been sought for as members of the Rochester division, and the result is very creditable.

professions have been sought for as members of the Rochester division, and the result is very creditable.

"It is believed that the force could be made ready and available in a very short time for manning a ship of war lying in New York harbor. Their efficiency immediately after embarkation would depend upon their previous instruction. Of the force now on board, for example, good officers and men could be furnished for manning two eight-inch gunt urrets of a battle ship, and two eight-inch guns and the rapid dring battery of any cruiser. Efficient signal men could also be furnished and a number of very valuable artificers.

In the organization of the interior line of defence of our coasts the State naval militia must be considered as a highly important factor. The maintenance of the first or outer line naturally would fail to the regular navy, with its seagoing battle ships and cruisers, but this line is of such great extent and the available force so limited that some other corps must undoubtedly be entrusted with the actual defence of the coast and harbors, manning the coast guard ships and improvised torpead loats, planting mine fields, and the literal communication by signals. This branch of the defence would seem to fall most naturally to the naval militia of the States.

ships and improvised torpedo locate, planting mine fields, and the literal communication by signals. This branch of the defence would seem to fail most naturally to the neval militia of the States.

The Commercial Alliance Life Insurance Company Reported Insolvent,

ALBANY, Sept. 13 .- Superintendent of Insurance James F. Pierce this afternoon reported the Commercial Alliance Life Insurance Com-pany of New York to the Attorney-General for him to begin proceedings to have a receiver ap-pointed to wind up the affairs of the company. This action was taken as the result of an examination of the company's affairs, which was made under Superintendent Pierce's direction made under Superintendent Fierce's direction by Examiners Isaac Van der Poel and James E. Cross to date of June 30 last. Superintendent Fierce has been unable to take final action in the matter of this company before, owing to the fact that a re-valuation of the company's policies had to be made some time subsequent to June 30, and a further delay was caused from the fact that before action could be taken in the premises by the Superintendent the company, under the statute, was entitled to a hearing. This hearing has only recently been had, and upon the strength of it and the corporation's inability to make good the deficiency found, the Superintendent's action, as stated above, became at once necessary.

The Commercial Alliance was incorporated in 1888 under the name of the Commercial Union Life Insurance Company. Its capital stock was $150,000. Subsequently this was increased to $200,000. The examination shows this capital to be entirely wiped out, and a further deficiency of $76,000 to exist in the company's assets. This deficiency is set forth as follows:

Total admitted assets, $273,300,000; total liabilities on policyholders' account, $350,512; deciency as regards policyholders, $76,115.40. This is the first company so reported to the Attorney-General since 1887. by Examiners Isaac Van der Poel and James E.

given, saying that they had cut timber on State lands with the consent of Thomas Powers, State Forester, who charged and to whom they paid a stumpage of 25 or 30 cents.

At the office of the Forest Commission it was learned that no communication whatever had as yet been received from the Comptroller's office in connection with these matters, and, furthermore, that no attention would be paid to anonymous affidavits. Mr. Powers denies the charges stoutly, and defies his accusers to prove any of their charges on the witness stand. It was learned that all the trespasses mentioned in the Comproller's statement had been duly reported by Mr. Powers from time to time, and his reports on the same are on file in the office of the Forest Commission. It was further said that the statement of the alleged deponents that they had purchased timber of the State is false. The Forest Commission, although it had received bids from various parties for timber, never said or executed a contract for a single tree. The bids which were referred to the Land Commissions were disapproved by that Board by a vote of three to two, and no further action was taken on them.

THE POOL SELLING CASES. The Alien's Plending Postpourd The Validity of the Violated Statute.

The Allen, William Roberts, Henry Liv-ingston, Augustus Bendix, and Thomas C. Lee were arraigned yesterday at the bar of the Gen-eral Sessions, before Recorder Smyth, to plead to an indictment charging them with pool sell-ing. In behalf of Allen, Lawyer Emanuel M. ing. In behalf of Ailen, Lawyer Emanuel M. Friend asked that the pleading be deferred for one week to enable him to examine the indictment. Recorder Smyth granted the application. Then Lawyer Joseph F. Moss, in behalf of the other defendants, pleaded not guilty as to the first three counts of the indictment and filed a demurrer as to the fourth count, on the grounds that the count did not set furth facts constituting a crime, and that the statute which was declared in the count to have been violated was unconstitutional and void. The fourth count specifies that the defendants received and registered money to be forwarded to the race track and placed upon a wager in a trial of speed and endurance, All of the defendants being under bail, they were released.
